A world Heritage Site is a site determined by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) to have significant cultural or natural importance to humanity. As such the sites are protected and maintained by the International World Heritage Programme which is administered by the UNESCO World Heritage Committee. Because World Heritage Sites are places that are significant culturally and naturally, they vary in type and include forests, lakes, monuments, buildings and cities.

World Heritage Sites can also be a combination of both cultural and natural areas. For example, Mount Huangshan in China is a site with significance to human culture because it played a role in historical Chinese art and literature. The mountain is also significant because of its physical landscape characteristics.

History of World Heritage Sites

Although the idea of protecting cultural and natural heritage sites around the world began in the early twentieth century momentum for its actual creation was not until the 1950s. In 1954, Egypt started plans to build the Aswan High Dam to collect and control water from Nile River. The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,
 While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring:

 For you they call, the swaying mass, their eager faces turning;

 My father does not feel my arm, he has no pulse nor will;

- i) The full form of 'ALS' is _____.
- ii) ALS is also called _____.

ALS (Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis or Lou Gehrig's disease) can start off with something as simple as a weak feeling in your hands or feet. It's a disease that attacks the brain cells that control a lot of your muscle movement. Signs of ALS can appear gradually. ALS is a progressive nervous system (neurological) disease that destroys nerve cells and causes disability. ALS is often called Lou Gehrig's disease, after the famous baseball player who was diagnosed with it. As the disease progresses, muscle weakness spreads to other parts of the body, making everyday tasks such as buttoning a shirt or turning a key challenging.

You may notice a funny feeling in your hand that makes it harder to grip the steering wheel. Some common early symptoms include: Stumbling, a hard time holding items with your hands, slurred speech, swallowing problems, muscle cramps and muscle stiffness.

ALS is inherited in 5 to 10 % of cases. Smoking is the only likely environmental risk factor for ALS. Some evidence suggests that exposure to lead or other substances in the workplace or at home may be linked to ALS. Much study has been done, but no single agent or chemical has been consistently associated with ALS. Recent studies indicate that people who have served in the military are at higher risk of ALS, may be due to exposure to certain metals or chemicals, traumatic injuries, viral infections, and intense exertion.

ALS doesn't usually affect your bowel or bladder control, your senses or your thinking ability. It's possible to remain actively involved with your family and friends.

There is currently no cure, and treatment aims to relieve symptoms, provide social and emotional support, and possibly slow disease progression.

A2) Read the following paragraph about the causes of pollution and the possible solutions and tabulate the information.

Pollution levels are increasing day by day. There are various reasons for it. Air pollution is caused chiefly by industrial pollutants and by increased levels of RSPM due to higher flow of vehicular traffic. Water pollution is caused to a large extent by industrial effluents and the immersion of POP idols. Sound pollution levels have increased due to blaring loudspeakers during festival time (which are many) and increased volume of traffic.

In order to solve the problem of air pollution, the chief method seems to be tree plantation. More and more citizens and NGO's should take up green causes with civic authorities. We need to protect our forests and conserve our mangroves. In order to solve the problem of water pollution we need to develop effective waste management techniques. Also eco-friendly idols should be used during festival time. An awareness by the general populace is very necessary to solve the problem of sound pollution. Strict enforcement of decibel levels during occasions and festival time by the police is a must.
